Numerous safety precautions were employed as the process of removing more than 300 55-gallon drums buried in a former landfill began. Samples from each of the drums, which are believed to contain toxic materials, must be taken and analysis of the substance completed before the drums can be safely disposed of. Toxic material removed from site

Cleanup of toxic material began Wednesday morning on the site of a former landfill near Wick Elementary School, in Romulus.

Approximately 370 55-gallon drums believed to contain toxic material are being excavated from the 40-acre area. The Department of Natural Resources contracted an Illinois firm, Maecorp, for the excavation, transportation and disposal of the drums. This phase of the cleanup is expected to cost $67,000.

During the next fiscal year, DNR officials plan to conduct a study of the area to determine if the ground water has been contaminated in the dump or surrounding area. The study will cost $500,000.

The exact contents of each of the metal drums is not known yet. DNR officials believe they contain metal powders and other metallic waste. Eventually, each of the drums will be analyzed.

A fire at the site in 1987 led DNR officials to the drums buried there. Apparently, the area was used as a landfill in the 1950s and 1960s.

The discovery concerned DNR officials, as well as residents, because of its proximity to Wick Elementary School and numerous homes. The site has also been used for bicycle riding.

Earlier this year, Romulus officials were informed the city may be considered partially responsible for the site and may be charged for all or part of the cleanup. Officials with the DNR claim the city obtained a five-acre section of the dump for $1 through tax reversion in 1988.

City officials, however, have repeatedly denied responsibility for the site. Last month, Mayor Beverly McAnally said the city does not even own the section of land in question.

'City of future' set in new plan

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

A master plan focusing on residential, commercial and mixed-use development was approved by city councilmembers Monday.

The plan, which had been in the works nearly two years, replaces a set of guidelines established in 1976. After staging a public hearing on the updated version, members of the city planning commission approved the new plan in April.

Dennis Meagher, master planner, presented the finalized version to councilmembers Monday.

"This is the direction we'd like the city grow," Meagher said.

One objective of the plan is increased housing within the city. The western portion of Romulus was identified as a key area for residential development.

Another goal is the establishment of a community recreation complex in the northwest section of Romulus. Residential development would tie in with the recreation package, Meagher said.

In addition to housing, the master plan developers encourage commercial shopping centers throughout the city, light industrial uses near the Detroit Metropolitan Airport and heavy industrial and trucking activities in the northeast corner of town near existing expressways.

The concept of mixed-use development was also explored in the new plan for the city. This type of development is described as an area with three or more significant uses — such as retail, office, lodging, entertainment or recreational — that are mutually supporting.

To encourage such developments, wide boulevards were suggested, along with planned parking to avoid a "cluttered" appearance.

A two-page pamphlet containing a summary of the master plan and maps showing the four major development goals are available without charge to Romulus residents. They can be obtained at City Hall.

Local family clinic is scene of protest

A Romulus family planning clinic was targeted Saturday morning by protestors on both sides of the abortion issue.

Between 300 and 400 people converged in front of the Northland Family Planning Clinic on Wayne Road at 6:30 a.m. Forty people, anti-abortionists, were arrested later in the morning when they attempted to block the entrance to the clinic.

Those arrested were served with court appearance tickets and released when the protest disbanded at noon. They are required to appear in district court July 17 on the misdemeanor charges of trespassing.

Present during the protest were 25 Romulus police officers along with 50 officers from neighboring communities.

A ruling was expected to be handed down by the U.S. Supreme Court Monday on a Missouri case that may affect the legality of abortions. The protest is believed to be a last-minute attempt to voice concerns by movements on both sides of the controversial issue.

County program vacates building

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

The Beacon Day Treatment Program, formerly operated in Romulus, will be moved to a building in Inkster.

John Hill Junior High School will house the program which services emotionally impaired children from kindergarten through 12th grade. The building is owned by the Wayne/Westland school district.

The Wayne County Intermediate School District, which resumed responsibility for the program when Romulus officials refused to renew a contract for the program, is coordinating the move.

Romulus school officials relinquished responsibility for the program because of concerns with the condition of the main building housing the program — the old South Middle School building. The program served less than 10 Romulus students and district officials wanted the WCISD to shoulder the cost of building repairs.

In addition, Romulus officials were concerned about liability for the program.

The John Hill building has been vacant for several years, according to WCISD officials. It will be leased from the Wayne/Westland school district.

Beacon staff members are in the process of moving into the new building.

The Beacon Day Treatment program serves students from 23 area school districts.

Results of airport study are revealed

By BARBARA WILSON
ANP News Editor

The proposed $1 billion Metro World Centre, in Romulus, will offer high-technology companies an attractive and cost-efficient alternative to the city of Ann Arbor, according to a recently completed study of airport-related developments in western Wayne County.

Romulus citizens and city officials have until tomorrow to make suggestions regarding the study, prepared by the Arthur D. Little consulting firm. The firm was hired by officials from Westland, Romulus, Wayne and Inkster to study future uses for former Eloise property, on Michigan Avenue, in Westland, and all other local sites for potential airport-related developments.

Representatives of the Little firm met June 27 with community leaders from Westland, Romulus and Inkster to review the report. Talks about such a study began in 1986.

The Eloise property was one of the key areas studied by the consulting firm. The 220-acre site was the former home of the Wayne County hospital and poorhouse. Merriman Road forms the western boundary of the property, which is located approximately three miles north of the Detroit Metropolitan Airport, in Romulus.

With Henry Ruff Road to the east, Michigan Avenue to the north and a residential subdivision to the south, the site is equipped with underground utilities. A Conrail rail line extends through the northern edge of the property — making the site ideal for development, according to the report.

Also studied in the report was a 700-acre site in Romulus eyed by a developer who hopes to build a $1 billion officer-hotel-educational center. The 10-year project, the Metro World Centre, will be constructed between Wayne, Merriman and Ecorse roads and I-94.

The site is located less than one mile from the Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Inkster Industrial Acres was another area considered in the study. The six-acre site is adjacent to the Eloise property, south of Michigan Avenue.

Parking decks at airport closed

Two levels of the parking deck at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, in Romulus, have been closed for safety reasons, according to Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara.

Two temporary gravel parking lots are being created and will replace the 2,000 spaces of the closed parking deck. A third lot being built is expected to be finished by mid-August.

The two lots are located at the corner of Lucas Drive and the east I-94 Service Drive and between the I-94 Service Drive and the Northwest and Delta airline hangars. Parking cost will be $2 per day.

The new lot, expected to contain 2,800 spaces, is being built on Goddard Road, north of the airport. The cost to park there will be $3 per day.

Fines increase for illegal parkers

A new law, signed in law last month by Gov. Blanchard, increases the fines for illegal parking in a handicapped space.

In addition, Public Act 89 establishes a maximum fine of $100 for those who feign a handicap to obtain access to handicapped parking. The law also further defined a handicapped individual to include debilitating lung disease, severe cardiovascular disease, severe arthritis and neurological or orthopedic impairments.

New laws target tax assessments

Two new laws, Public Act 64 and 85, both signed in late June by Gov. James Blanchard, will better inform citizens of the procedures to protest a special tax assessment.

When citizens receive a special-assessment hearing notice, it will now include a message that an appearance and protest must be made at the hearing, in order to appeal the amount of the assessment, according to Peter Dewan, legislative assistant to the governor.

'Pay up' County law targets drunken drivers

By DANIEL CALABRESE
ANP Staff Writer

A proposal to make drunken drivers pay for their own punishments was considered June 29 by members of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

The bill - which was referred back to the committee level - is sponsored by Commissioner Edward A. Boike Jr., of the 15th commission district. It would require any drunken driver arrested by the Wayne County Sheriff's Department to pay the cost of arrest, prosecution and punishment.

Members of the county public safety and judiciary committee, chaired by Commissioner Jackie Currie, of the fourth commission district, are studying the proposal and are slated to report back to the full commission when they have a recommendation.

The proposed law would affect anyone under the influence of alcohol or drugs and would target incidents on any Wayne County road or waterway.

Boike predicted that he would have 100 percent support from the full commission, when the proposal is reported out of committee. A decision is expected before the end of July.

To help ensure that support, Boike said, he plans to attend all sessions of the public safety and judiciary committee, at which the matter is discussed. Although he is not a member of that committee, Boike said, he wants to continue to promote the idea.

In considering the proposal, commission members have asked officials from the county Department of Management and Budget to report on the average cost of arresting, prosecuting and punishing a drunken driver.

Boike explained that those costs will include the period "from the time the officer puts on the lights to booking them and taking them to trial."

Boike has been working on the proposal for several months. The idea was partially influenced by officials from the city of Lincoln Park, who are currently experimenting with the idea, Boike said.

Lincoln Park officials supplied Boike with a copy of their city ordinance. Officials from Hazel Park also enacted a similar proposal in January.

In a model resolution, Boike said, the plan is designed to save taxpayers' money and to discourage drunken driving.

All money generated from the proposed law would go to reduce the cost of enforcing drunken-driving statutes.

Nevertheless, Hazel Park Police Chief Al Sadow was skeptical of the plan when it was first enacted there. Sadow acknowledged that the plan would save money but said it would do little to discourage drunken driving, because those who drink and drive are too careless to think about any financial consequences before doing so.

Grand opening planned for hotel

The Pickett Suite Inn, on Wickham Road, will be the site of a grand-opening celebration July 13.

James Pickett, chairman of the Pickett Hotel Company, will be present at the opening of the luxury hotel.

Ceiling bids are approved

Members of the Romulus Board of Education recently approved a $37,170 bid from Ann Arbor Ceiling and Partition to replace ceilings containing asbestos in several district buildings.

Board members approved a bid to remove the asbestos several weeks ago. The asbestos removal is required by federal law. School officials in April submitted a report for state approval outlining the location of asbestos in district buildings and plans to remove or contain it.

Buildings targeted for removal are Merriman Elementary School, Romulus Senior High School and the administrative offices. Officials hope to complete this project by late summer.

Firefighter is honored

Romulus Fire Station Number Four is now the Leonard S. Gierak Fire Station.

City officials approved the dedication of the fire station in memory of the deceased firefighter during a city council meeting Monday night. The dedication was recommended by representatives of the fire and police departments and members of the safety commission.

A formal dedication of the site was staged at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Cable channel nearly ready

Members of the Romulus Cable Commission are confident the second city channel will be in operation soon.

Channel 42 will be a public-access station. The existing cable channel for Romulus was declared a government channel earlier this year.

In addition, commission members recently purchased several pieces of equipment for cable operations. A VCR and monitor, purchased separately, totaled $900. A modulator, necessary for broadcasting, was purchased for approximately $1,100.

Commission members also reported Omnicom Cable, the company servicing Romulus, is installing lines on Herman Road and in southeast section of town.

Youth arrested for flag burning

A 14-year-old Romulus boy was arrested early Monday morning for seizing and burning flags from graves in the Romulus Cemetery.

The youth reportedly burned nine flags and took seven more without damaging them. Police do not have a motive.

The boy was apprehended by police officers as he was climbing over a fence to leave the cemetery. He is now in the custody of the Wayne County youth home.

Flood control action proposed

Romulus is one of several communities that may benefit from a flood-control project for Southeastern Michigan recently approved by the House of Representatives.

Of the $662,000 that would go toward the project, $62,000 would be used for the design and engineering work of a storm water retention basin for Ecorse Creek.

Government officials report flooding in the creek drainage basin has caused damage in Romulus, Allen Park, Dearborn Heights, Lincoln Park and Taylor.

The appropriations bill has now moved to the Senate for consideration.

Local track star heads to Europe

It is athletic talent that will take a Romulus high school student to Europe this summer to compete in an international track event.

Carmita Brown, 15, was preparing Monday for her 10-day trip to West Germany and Austria, where she will compete at the World Sports Exchange.

The World Sports Exchange forms teams of top runners from schools throughout the state to experience international competition and foreign cultures. This year, 45 Michigan students will participate in the event, July 10 through 19.

The excitement of being chosen for the program was slightly marred for Brown when she learned about the expenses required — $1,695.

"I was happy, but at first I didn't think I could go because of the price," Brown said.

Neighbors and family all chipped in, however, so Brown could make the trip.

Brown is taking the recent rush of compliments and attention she has been receiving in stride.

"I try to play it modest," she said, smiling.

Brown has set two records this year in the 100-meter and 300-meter hurdles. Brown is also a member of the school record-breaking 400-meter and 800-meter relay teams.

"She takes her track seriously and is continuously striving to better her previous performances. She works hard in practice and always listens to constructive criticism," said Brown's track coach, Ron Bayes. "She wants to be the best and with her work ethic and attitude, I see no reason why she can't be."

Brown does want to be the best. She plans to continue her running career throughout high school and college. Ultimately, Brown said, she wants to run at the Olympics.

It is the competition and "joy of winning" that attracts Brown to track.

Meanwhile, Brown is ready for her competition abroad. Her grandmother is going along for moral support.

Being a normal teenager, Brown is looking forward to shopping in Europe almost as much as the competition.

Romulus firefighters' performance receives good ratings

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Romulus firefighters gave themselves high marks last week when they met to critique their performances during a recent chemical explosion.

The explosion occurred near a chemical distribution plant on Huron River Drive as the result of two chemicals inadvertently mixed inside a tanker. Eight minor injuries were reported as a result of exposure to the chemical. In addition to Romulus firefighters, representatives from the Western Wayne County Mutual Aid Hazardous Material Team were also on hand.

Chief William Greenslait of the Romulus Fire Department said he likes to meet with the firefighters every time they deal with a large-scale incident such as this one.

"I wanted everyone to know as far as I'm concerned, we did a good job," Greenslait said.

One of the best factors of the firefighters' performance was the fact they listened to orders, Greenslait said. They were especially cooperative with members of the hazardous material team, he said.

Areas for improvement included placement of equipment. Some of the firefighters left protective equipment on the driveway to the chemical company, blocking access.

Plans are drawn for historical park

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

The historical museum under construction on Hunt Street may eventually be one part of the Romulus Historical Park.

The proposed park may cost as much as $4 million, according to Dennis Oakes, director of community development.

A major portion of the downtown project would involve landscaping, Oakes said. The park would include picnic areas, paths and benches surrounded by historic structures such as the red schoolhouse/historical building being restored by the Romulus Historical Society. If approved, city officials and members of the historical society would seek grants to finance the project, Oakes said.

Buildings proposed for the area include a windmill, gazebo and an old-fashioned train caboose.

Members of the historical society have been in contact with CSX railroad representatives and have been informed that the company may be able to supply a caboose once transportation and installation are arranged.

A plan of the area, prepared by McKenna and Associates, includes additional buildings to be added during years to come. "It's a neat concept," Oakes said.

The Romulus Planning Commission is expected to review plans for the park in July. Meanwhile, an architect's rendering of the proposed facility is on display at city hall in front of the mayor's office.

City seeks overpass

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

City officials will team up with local business people to petition the county for railroad overpasses at Eureka, Goddard and Ecorse roads.

The petition will be a joint attempt by United Auto Workers Local 163, Chevrolet-Pontiac-Canada Group on Ecorse Road and the City of Romulus.

In January, union and business officials from the General Motors plant contacted city councilmembers with concerns about blockages at the railroad crossings, which are used by Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad. The GM representatives claim the tracks are currently the most heavily used in Michigan, and use is expected to increase as railroad operations grow.

The petitioners plan to request funding for the project from numerous sources, including the railroad company. The cost of the project is unknown at this time, according to Robert Ranka, CPC plant manager.

"It's no easy project," he said.

Cleanup

The DNR officials will continue to search for the party or parties responsible for the dumping, according to David Rymph, environmental quality manager for the environmental response division of the DNR. By studying the contents of the drums on the site, officials hope to find some clue of who might be responsible.

"I honestly am not very optimistic about this particular site because of the condition of the drums," Rymph said.

Most of the drums are in poor condition, many with large sections missing. Other drums are completely crushed, Rymph said.

The entire cleanup process is expected to take 38 days. The drums can be excavated within three days, Rymph said. Analysis of the drum contents, however, is more time consuming.

Once test results are compiled, the cleanup crew will know how best to dispose of the drums.

Numerous safety precautions must be exercised during cleanup, Rymph said. Crew members operate machinery with explosion-proof shields. They wear splash-proof suits, double gloves and oxygen masks.

On the site are emergency showers operated by a pump and generator, fire equipment and emergency eyewash. The area where the excavation is conducted is taped off. When leaving this area, workers must remove their protective gear to avoid contaminating the "clean area."

It is suggested that residents of the area and children be kept away.

Synchronized stretching

Whether they want to shave a few pounds for summer swimsuits or tone their muscles, students in the summer stretch and tone class offered by the Romulus Recreation Department usually have a good time. The class is offered Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the recreation building on Bibbins. Part of the exercise routine consists of leg lifts, as Terri Estes (above) demonstrates. Laura Love (left) seems to enjoy the side stretches. ANP photos by Debbie Poutney

Study

"The area might be well suited for auto suppliers and things like that," Schroeder said.

Uses outlined for Metro World Centre included many of those already suggested for the site, such as office space, an educational center, residential housing and some retail buildings.

"An opportunity for Metro World Centre would be to develop quality, cost-competitive housing targeted to flight crews supporting the (Detroit) hub," the consultants reported.

Such a complex could offer recreational amenities, parking and security services. The need for upscale hotel space may also increase in the area, according to the report. This new need may be the result of increased stopover traffic in Detroit, because of the local designation as a hub for Northwest Airlines.

The Metro World Centre, according to the report, will also offer high-technology companies an attractive and cost-competitive alternative to Ann Arbor.

Although the Inkster and Westland sites may be too distant to benefit from direct airport-related developments, the two communities are ideal for air-freight and storage-warehouse operations.

The consultants also suggested establishment of a marketing committee to determine how best to present the area to potential developers.

Also suggested was a master plan for Willow Run Airport. Such a plan could highlight the role of the freight airport in the future of all western Wayne County developments.

Burning issue

Most area residents oppose flag destruction

By DANIEL CALABRESE
ANP Staff Writer

Few local lawmakers or residents expressed support for the U.S. Supreme Court decision which stated that burning of the American flag is an exercise of freedom of speech.

The decision, which was handed down June 17, overturned the conviction of Gregory L. Johnson on charges that he burned an American flag at the 1984 Republican National Convention, in Dallas.

Two conservative Reagan appointees to the court, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, were joined by three liberals, William Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry Blackmun, in ruling that flag burning is a constitutionally protected exercise of free expression.

Members of Congress took turns June 28 denouncing the decision, speaking so vehemently that the House of Representatives did not adjourn until 2 a.m.

Locally, state legislators and residents expressed widespread support for a constitutional amendment to ban flag burning, an idea that has been endorsed by members of both parties and by President George Bush.

Such an amendment, if approved by three-fourths of the Congress and signed by the president, would have to be ratified by two-thirds of the states.

State Rep. Justine Barns (D-Westland), said that, as a first-generation American, she is offended by flag burning or other disrespectful uses of the flag.

"I'm offended if someone abuses it, and I don't like it being used for drapes on windows," Barns said.

State Rep. James Kosteva (D-Canton Township), joined in support of the proposed amendment, even though he said the

If they want (flags) to be burned in protest, that's perfectly all right. I think we should spend our time on something more productive than that.

— L.J. Schumacher
Canton Township

I was a Girl Scout. And I was always with the idea that you don't even leave the flag in the rain.

— Jamie Graham
Westland

constitution should not be tampered with excessively.

"I think the constitutional amendment process is something of a sacred process," Kosetva said. "We should use it only for the most notable changes. But I think the flag is a unique enough symbol that it warrants the protection we're trying to give it."

Most local residents also supported the amendment idea, although not everyone found it a good idea.

L.J. Schumacher of Canton, a retired employee of Sherwin-Williams Co., said Congress should concern itself with more important matters.

"If they want (flags) to be burned in protest, that's perfectly all right," Schumacher said. "I think we should spend our time on something more productive than that. We've got so many other problems."

Members of Congress, Schumacher said, should concentrate on more substantive issues if they expect to receive pay increases.

But Jamie Graham, of Westland, disagreed, saying she has learned respect for the flag throughout her life.

"I was a Girl Scout," Graham said. "And I was always with the idea that you don't even leave the flag in the rain."

Graham said she supports the amendment, as did John Koffel and Steve Phipps, landscape workers for Canton Township.

"It's just not right," Koffel said.

Phipps had even stronger condemnation for flag burners.

"I feel like burning the flag is like burning your father," Phipps said. "Who would want to do that anyway? It's the liberals, basically, isn't it?"

School-reform skeptics

Business leaders predicting demise of ballot issues

By DANIEL CALABRESE
ANP Staff Writer

Local business leaders expressed support last week for the concept of school finance-reform, but few expressed confidence that the idea will be successful this year.

In an unusual move, state lawmakers have presented voters with two proposals to consider on the Nov. 7 ballot. Proposal A is a 1/2 cent sales-tax increase that would pump $400 million into public education statewide.

Proposal B is a 2 cent sales-tax hike and a property-tax reduction. If it were approved, $500 million would be given to Michigan public schools. At the same time, residential property taxes would be reduced by an estimated 37 percent. Business property taxes would be trimmed an estimated 22 percent.

The proposal which nets the most "yes" votes will be enacted. If the majority of Michigan voters cast "no" votes on both proposals, the two tax-hike ideas and school finance-reform proposals will become history.

Rejection of both is what most area business leaders are predicting - even though most are expressing support for one of the proposals.

John Rogin, owner of John Rogin Buick, in Wayne, said he supports the 2 cent proposal because it would do the most to make schools a top priority.

"It is, without a doubt, a priority, right behind the drug problem," Rogin said.

The size of the sales-tax increase, which has been widely criticized as too expensive, was not a factor in Rogin's position, because he believes it will have little effect on auto sales.

"I don't believe that anyone's going to go to Ohio for 1 (cent on the dollar)," Rogin said. "If you are a resident of the state of Michigan, you have a loyalty, and you have to support our children."

A political analysis released last week by officials from the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools shows that Rogin's position is at odds with others in his field. Study results predicted that the Michigan Automobile Dealers Association, along with the Detroit Automobile Dealers Association and the Big Three automakers, will oppose the 2 cent proposal and support the 1/2 cent proposal.

Daryl Raymond, a partner with Henry R. Deering Insurance, in Belleville, said he would also support the 1/2 cent measure.

"The one that just gouges the public is too much," Raymond said.

Others named in the Plymouth-Canton study as probable 1/2 cent supporters include the Michigan Retailers Association, Michigan Manufacturers Association, Michigan Farm Bureau, Dow Chemical, K-Mart, Meijer's, the United Auto Workers and the AFL-CIO.

The only business group listed among probable supporters of the 2 cent proposal was the Michigan Association of Realtors.

But at least one local Realtor said those in his field may not be particularly interested in the issue.

Ed Hood, of Ed Hood Real Estate, in Canton Township, said the proposals would have an indirect effect on the real-estate industry but not enough to prompt him and many others to become actively involved in the issue.

"They don't pay that much attention to it, really, until it becomes a problem," Hood said.

Plymouth-Canton schools Superintendent John M. Hoben predicted last week that both proposals would fail because voters will be split between the two and will not give either enough support.

Hoben called the two-proposal approach a "cop-out" by state lawmakers, saying they are more interested in avoiding disagreements than in crafting good policy.

On the state level, the proposals are facing trouble from powerful people and groups who oppose both. That group includes state Senate Majority Leader John Engler (R-Mount Pleasant) - the likely Republican candidate for governor in 1990 - along with the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, the Michigan Merchants Council and tax-limitation advocates, such as Richard Headlee, the 1982 Republican gubernatorial nominee, and former Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson.

The 2 cent sales-tax hike, however, is being supported by Gov. James Blanchard and the Small Business Association of Michigan.

Parents have mixed feelings on the issue

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

The latest school finance-reforms proposed by state officials are being received with reservation by area parents.

Two finance proposals will be on the ballot Nov. 7. One of the plans would increase state sales tax by 1/2 cent and is expected to generate $400 million for education. The other plan would increase sales taxes by 2 cents and cut residential property taxes by approximately one-third. Lawmakers claim this plan would generate $500 million for schools.

If voters approve both proposals, the one with the greater number of positive votes will go into effect. If both plans are rejected, school finance-reform goes back to state lawmakers.

Some area parents said they are tired of hearing promises of school money from lawmakers.

"What they put toward education ends up being taken away," complained Teresa Publisky, a Canton Township parent. "If they were to put it in addition to what's already there, it would be one thing."

Publisky doubts that schools will have more money for operations in the long run.

"It all seems like political hogwash," said Terri DeBellefeuille, member of the parent-teacher organization for Barth Elementary School, in Romulus.

DeBellefeuille said school funding difficulties in her own district have made her skeptical about reform plans.

"I would be for the 2 cent increase in sales tax if I knew all the money went to the schools," DeBellefeuille said.

Pamela Brown, secretary of the parent-teacher organization at Baylor Elementary School, in Inkster, said more than a sales tax increase is needed to correct inequities in school funding.

"I know Inkster would not benefit as much as other school systems. There just has to be a better system of checks and balances," she said.

Nevertheless, Brown believes the 2 cent increase will likely be approved by voters.

"When you tell parents, 'Yes, we can reduce property taxes. Yes, we'll only raise your sales tax a couple of cents, and it would be for your children,' most parents would say 'yes' to it," Brown said.

Linda Pratt, president of the parent-teacher organization for the Wayne/Westland schools, also believes the 2 cent increase will be approved. Although she does not see the proposal as a final solution to school funding problems, Pratt believes the proposal is a positive start.

VISITING TIKAL'S MAYAN TEMPLES

A visit to Guatemala is not complete unless you take an excursion to the majestic, ancient Mayan center of Tikal, nestled in the rain forest 340 miles North of Guatemala City.

Tikal, the most impressive of the more than 1000 Mayan sites spread throughout the country, dates back from at least 600 BC and flourished until 900 AD. Seen from the air, it rises like a jewel, half shining in the sun, half swallowed forever by the jungle.

The ceremonial center, covering nearly 8 square miles, includes more than 3000 temples, palaces, plazas, monuments, causeways, residences and other structures. To see all main sites, 2-3 days is best, but a one-day visit will permit a breathtaking overview and the opportunity for some priceless photos.

The government has launched a major tourist development program including a modern 60 room "tree-house" hotel in Tikal, and completion of a paved road network to Guatemala City. In Santa Elena - 40 miles south of Tikal, plans call for a new 800 room tourist complex and an international jet port.

Summertime brings out that truck

just desserts

sue willett

It won't be long now, heed this warning.

It will start innocently enough with just the faintest sound of caliope music or sweet, ringing bells. Instantly, children will appear like locusts from every nook and cranny of the neighborhood, all screaming for money for the infamous ice cream man.

There will be tears, trauma, crime and punishment all due to the much-maligned ice cream truck. Personally, I've always thought of this summertime phenomenon as akin to a visit from Freddy Krueger when I remember resentfully handing out change every day to my two imploring sons begging for a treat from the truck. Never mind that the family freezer was full of ice cream novelties, and forget the time, money and effort that went into the preparation of homemade ice cream for my little darlings. No, nothing would do but one of those chemical-laden, artificially flavored and sweetened petroleum by-products because it comes from that lousy music-playing truck. Yech.

Obviously, my sons are older (and I like to think wiser, now) and they apparently realize the error of their childish ways. We often tell the story of them begging their grandmothers to buy them "cookies from the store" because their mother would only give them homemade ones. My cruelty in depriving them of these commercial products, including dried mashed potatoes, is legendary in our family.

This experience, however, did make me an expert on homemade ice cream, something I think is a national treasure. If the world were ruled by a character similar to mine, an ice cream freezer would be mandatory in every home. Here are two recipes for absolutely fabulous, rich and nutritious ice creams.

The kids, however, will still chase Freddy down the street.

Cinnamon chocolate ice cream

- 3 13-ounce cans Pet Evaporated Milk
- 2 1/2 1-ounce squares unsweetened baking chocolate
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

Combine one can (1 2/3 cups) evaporated milk and chocolate in a small saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until chocolate melts and mixture is smooth. Meanwhile, beat eggs, sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg in large mixing bowl until well blended. Stir in hot chocolate mixture. Stir in remaining two cans (3 1/3 cups) evaporated milk. Refrigerate until well chilled. Pour into ice cream freezer container. Churn and freeze according to manufacturer's directions. Makes 2 quarts.

Peanut butter chocolate ice cream

- 2 13-ounce cans Pet Evaporated Milk, divided
- 2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened baking chocolate
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 to 1 cup sugar
- 4 to 6 tablespoons chunky peanut butter

Combine one cup evaporated milk and chocolate in small saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until chocolate melts and mixture is smooth. Meanwhile, beat eggs and sugar in large mixing bowl until well blended. Beat in peanut butter until smooth. Stir in hot chocolate mixture. Stir in remaining 2 1/3 cups evaporated milk. Refrigerate until well chilled. Pour into ice cream freezer container. Churn and freeze according to manufacturer's directions. Makes 2 quarts.

Anything from old-fashioned baked beans to low-calorie pasta dishes are included in a soon-to-be-released cookbook produced by members of the Belleville United Methodist church.

Fellowship Favorites, planned for a late-summer release, recognizes the sesquicentennial of the United Methodist Church. The project has been in the works since December.

Now, church members Nancy Carey and Wyn Ann Marosi are in the final stages of proofreading. During the earlier stages of the project, they were assisted by Sharon Spencer, the wife of the former church pastor.

The church secretary, Eunice Kauce, designed the cookbook cover.

Although Carey and Marosi agreed that compiling the cookbook has been fun, they have noticed some potentially dangerous side-effects.

"It makes you hungry looking through all of these recipes," Marosi explained.

Categories in the book include appetizers, breads and rolls, cakes and cookies, main dishes, soups and salads, vegetables and miscellaneous items. Approximately 400 recipes will be used, including many submitted by male cooks, Carey said.

Some of the entries are recipes used in previous church cookbooks, submitted by church members years ago. Marosi said defining some of the old-fashioned measurement systems used for these recipes was a challenge.

Many of the recipes are quite creative, she continued, such as those for garlic grits and a vegetable medley with peanut butter biscuits. A few of the entries, Marosi admitted, are a bit indulgent.

"There are some nice, rich, sticky, gooey things," she said, with a laugh. To order a copy of Fellowship Favorites, contact the church office at 697-9288. Cost is $7.00 per book.

Meanwhile, Carey and Marosi supplied some recipes for a sneak preview of the final product.

You're a professional. A wife. And you may be a high-risk mother-to-be.

Pregnant women are more than just mothers-to-be. They are also lawyers, doctors, engineers, teachers. . . . This often means that women are postponing first-time pregnancy until their late 30s, even into their 40s.

There are plenty of good reasons to wait to have a baby—but there's not a single reason to wait for good prenatal care. Because how you care for yourself and your baby during pregnancy is just as important as what you do after your baby arrives. And, while simply being an older mom doesn't necessarily put you or your baby at risk, you should find out just what potential risks there are. The sooner you find out, the better—for both of you. We're here to help.

At Oakwood Hospital, you'll find obstetricians, perinatologists, neonatologists, geneticists, and specialists in reproductive medicine. When you choose one of our doctors, all the resources of Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn, a 615-bed teaching facility where over 4,000 babies are delivered annually, will be available to you. As a Level III perinatal center, Oakwood Hospital's Women and Children's Health Care Center is equipped to handle high-risk deliveries, premature infants and other special-need babies. Our Neonatal Intensive Care Unit is staffed by physicians around the clock. And our specialists in perinatology care for the high-risk mother through pregnancy and delivery.

You've worked for years on building a satisfying career and a healthy marriage. But these are the most important nine months of your baby's life. So give your pregnancy the thought and care it deserves. Call Oakwood Hospital at 1-800-543-WELL for the name of a physician on our staff.

You and your baby are worth it.

Slip, sliding away . . .

The weekend of humidity was no sweat to several area youngsters, who enjoyed a cool plunge down a new 17-foot tall water slide which opened Saturday at the Lower Huron Metro Park, near Belleville. Located at the end of the 120-foot long slide is a 3-foot section of the park pool. The swimming section of the pool is 5 feet deep. A 12-foot diving well is located nearby. A plunge down the new slide costs the Metro-park visitor $1.50, which includes use of the pool. Slide and pool hours are from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and holidays; noon to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday. The park is located on South Huron Road, at the I-275 expressway. Enjoying a premiere ride on the slide Saturday and a dive in the park pool were Matthew Luttermoser (above), 10, of Romulus, and Danny Pearson (left), 10. Fore! Inkster golf course plan is still 'green'

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Golf popularity is on the upswing these days and county officials hope to cash in on the trend. Officials are optimistic about construction of a county-owned golf course proposed for land near Inkster Road and Michigan Avenue. The course would cover more than 200 acres and is expected to cost approximately $3.5 million. The idea for the project originated three years ago as part of the campaign platform of County Executive Edward McNamara. He promised increased recreational opportunities within the county. Approximately one year ago, a feasibility study was completed for the Inkster site. The study confirmed city officials' hopes for the project, claiming the area would be ideal for a golf course. Because of the growing golf craze, a county-owned course would be a wise investment, according to Dave Katz, a member of McNamara's staff. To support his claim, Katz cited an existing county-owned course - Warren Valley. Warren Valley is a 36-hole facility on Warren Road west of Beech Daly. "Four years ago it looked like a cow pasture," Katz said.

Today, he said, business at the course is exceptional. "If we built a brand new golf course every day for eight years we probably couldn't keep up," Katz said. "Golf gets in your blood. It's an addiction." The existing hills and trees on the Inkster site are a real plus, Katz said. "It's a golfer's dream," he said. Despite the enthusiasm generated by the proposal, it is still in the early stages of planning. An architect will be hired to design the course and a plan will be put into action to finance construction.

Romulus baseball coach is axed, cage coaches hired

By TERRY JACOBY
ANP Staff Writer

Romulus Baseball Coach Dennis Stoh, who has led the Eagles' baseball team for the past 16 years, was fired this week by Romulus School Board President Dr. William Bedell. "We had concerns about the way the team was being handled," Bedell said.

Bedell agreed that the team has not had a good record the past several seasons, but maintained that the winning percentage was not a factor in the firing.

"I feel after 16 years, he (Stoh) may have lost his perspective," Bedell said. "We want a program with different priorities. We are looking for the kids to learn about sportsmanship, have fun and win - in that order."

"We felt this order was missing in recent years and that it was time for a change."

Stoh, who would not comment on the situation before the announcement and was unavailable for comment after the decision, will continue as an assistant volleyball coach.

Dennis Stoh

"I've asked Fred (Coleman, athletic director) to find him a second sport so his financial situation would not be affected to a large degree," Bedell said.

Romulus officials will begin the search for a new coach next week.

Coleman announced last week the selection of a new varsity girls' basketball coach and a varsity boys' basketball coach.

Tim Cullen, a former assistant basketball coach at Redford Catholic Central High School, will coach the girls' team and Ron Bayes, a former assistant basketball coach at Eastern Michigan University, will take over the boys' team.

"Both have a great deal of experience and we are confident both will do excellent jobs," Coleman said.

Bayes, who was unavailable for comment, replaces Dan Henry. Henry, who wanted to spend more time with his family, will continue as coach of the Romulus track and cross country teams.

Cullen was a boys' assistant and junior varsity coach at Divine Child, Bishop Borgess and Wayne Memorial before accepting the job at Catholic Central.

"I'm looking forward to it," Cullen said. "I don't know what to expect. We have had some meetings, but nothing has really been started yet."

Cullen expects no problems making the switch from the boys team to the girls team.

"I guess there will be some differences, but it's still basketball," Cullen said.

Belleville athletes plan to pay for play in 1989-90 school year

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

Although the Van Buren School Board approved a pay-for-play athletic program for the 1989-90 school year, the final vote will come when parents reach - or don't reach - for their wallets to foot the $250 fee.

Faced with the elimination of the athletic program due to budget cuts prompted by the defeat of two millage proposals, Athletic Director Mike Colletta presented a pay-for-play plan for school athletes. The plan would require a $250 fee from each athlete participating in a varsity sport. Colletta's plan would allow a lesser fee for athletes participating in more than one sport and for families which have more than one youngster in the sports programs.

Fees from 600 participating athletes, for example, would bring $150,000 into the sports program. The fees would pay for supplies and part of the cost of staff salaries, but would not pay for new uniforms or other "extras."

Colletta said that 30 varsity football players are needed to sign up under the pay-for-play plan by Aug. 7, or the football program will not be continued in the fall.

"We had a pay-for-play plan once before," Colletta said. "We collected money from the athletes, but then a millage was passed and we were able to refund the money to the students."

Colletta noted that other districts have instituted the pay-for-play athletic programs. For example, athletes at Lapeer West High School paid a $275 per sport fee and their counterparts at Lapeer East High School paid a $192.50 fee, with the remainder subsidized by a booster club. Deckerville had charged $80 per student per sport, Stockbridge athletes paid $150 a sport and those at Hastings paid $125 per sport, with its booster club contributing an additional $25 per student. The Plymouth-Canton and Taylor school districts also have tried limited fee systems, Colletta said.

Belleville High School athletes, members of the Wolverine A Conference, participate in 16 sports: Boys track, tennis, baseball, wrestling, swimming, basketball, football, golf and cross country and Girls track, softball, swimming, tennis, cross country, volleyball and basketball. In competition with the eight schools in the conference, BHS won five championships, one district championship, one second-place and three third-place awards.

School Board Trustee Kathleen Fisher said she has had no feedback on the pay-for-play plan, but expects to receive reaction from parents and students when the new school term begins.

"We were reluctant to institute a fee for athletes, but we felt that the students and their parents should have an option. If we hadn't adopted the pay-for-play program, the athletics would have been eliminated," Fisher said. "Parents should have a chance to choose from the possibilities."

Fisher's daughter played on the volleyball team and participated in cross country running last year, and the school board member's family - as well as others in the community - will be paying fees to play in the fall.

Janet Millard, the parent of two Van Buren Public Schools students, said she believes the community will support the pay-for-play program. Millard predicted some special fundraisers will be conducted to benefit the sports program, and a majority of the parents of athletes will find a way to pay the fees.

Summertime fun abounds at area parks and pools

By CHRISTINE McCLOSKEY
ANP Special Writer

The problem - kids out of school with nothing to do.

The solution - arts and crafts at the local playground, a softball game, or perhaps even a refreshing swim in the city pool.

Local park and recreation departments will offer a wide variety of activities to keep area youth busy during the summer months.

The theory behind the existence of these summer activities is to give the kids something constructive and fun to do during their time off from school. As the old saying goes, an idle mind is the devil's workshop.

Unfortunately, there seems to be a lot of truth to that old saying. It is important to keep kids off the street and to offer them some "wholesome alternatives," Ron Wolkowicz, director of recreation for the city of Inkster, said.

In addition to the usual playground, swimming, and baseball programs, the Inkster Recreation Department is sponsoring a teen volunteer program this year.

The new program is for 10- to 15-year-olds, providing them with an opportunity to help the recreation department and the younger children.

For six hours each week, young people involved in this new program will not only strengthen their city recreation department, but their own characters as well, Wolkowicz said.

Also new in the city of Inkster this summer is a shuttle service which will make it easier for kids to get from their playgrounds to the pool. The shuttle will pick kids up from their playgrounds Wednesdays between 12:30 p.m. and 12:40 p.m., take them to the pool, and drop them back off at their playgrounds between 3 p.m. to 3:15 p.m.

For more information about any of these programs, contact the Inkster Recreation Department at 728-7530.

Just like the Inkster Recreation Department, officials of the Romulus Recreation Department believe kids need fun activities during the summer to occupy their free time.

Activities in Romulus include a summer supervised program offering arts and crafts, visits to Willow Pool, games and movies. Other activities include softball, gymnastics and dance and karate classes.

A skateboard facility is also being planned, according to Debbie Dick, director of the recreation department.

For more information about summer fun for kids in Romulus, contact the Romulus Recreation Department at 942-6852.

Van Buren Parks and Recreation is also hosting a myriad of summer activities for kids. For more information contact the recreation office at 699-8921.

Youngsters participating in the summer recreation programs offered by the Inkster Department of Parks and Recreation can include in their list of summer fun a cool dip in the city pool.

GENETICS TESTING: DECIPHERING CODES THAT MAY SIGNAL INHERITED DISEASE

By Kazutoshi Mayeda, Ph.D.

The key to our individuality lies in the makeup of our genes. From hair and eye color to height and weight, all of these traits are determined by the combination of genes in our cells.

But genes also carry the code for genetic disease. Today, that code can be deciphered by a series of tests that examine chromosomes, the elongated bodies in a cell that hold the genes, and deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA), a complex molecule found in the nucleus of each human cell.

WHAT TESTS CAN DETERMINE

By simply taking a blood sample and studying the genetic makeup of the prospective parents, a genetic specialist can determine if the couple may be at risk, and if so how much risk, of having a baby born with an inherited disease.

The first step is to conduct a complete medical history of the parents-to-be to determine if a genetic disease runs in the family. Then the specialist does blood and chromosome testing on the couple to see if defective genes are present.

Certain diseases are more common in people of different races: For example, cystic fibrosis is found generally in the white population, sickle cell anemia in blacks, and Tay-Sachs disease in those of Jewish descent. Other genetic diseases include muscular dystrophy and Down syndrome.

EXAMINING THE FETUS

If a woman already is pregnant, testing can be done on the fetus. As early as eight or nine weeks into the pregnancy, chorionic villus sampling (CVS) - in which a piece of the placental tissue is examined - can be conducted. If the fetus is between 13 and 15 weeks old, the physician can perform amniocentesis, in which the amniotic fluid surrounding the developing fetus is extracted and examined for genetic deformities.

By knowing the risks and chances for disease early on, couples can make an informed decision on pregnancy and prepare themselves - and their baby - for the future.
